SKETCH OF FIRST REGIMENT.

WHEN WAR was declared against the Kingdom of Spain, and a call for volunteers was made by the President, North Carolina was among the first to respond, and her first offering was the "First Regiment."

Colonel Joseph F. Armfield, of Statesville, N. C., who had commanded the Fourth Regiment of North Carolina State Guard for several years, was commissioned Colonel of the First Regiment of North Carolina Volunteers, and the men who had served under him in the State Guard for a number of years, nobly responded to the call and willingly linked their fate with his in the new "First."

The regiment went in camp at Raleigh, N. C., the camp being formally named "Camp Bryan Grimes," in honor of Col. Bryan Grimes, who commanded the Fourth North Carolina Regiment during the Civil War, and was mustered into the service of the United States on the 2nd day of May, 1898.

On May 18, 1898, telegraphic orders were received from the War Department to proceed to Tampa, Fla., and in compliance with these orders the regiment left Raleigh in three sections, over the Southern Railway, at noon, Sunday, May 22, 1898. At Columbia, S. C., an order countermanding the previous one received at Raleigh, N. C., was received, and in compliance with this order, the regiment was diverted to Jacksonville, Fla.

About seven miles south of Savannah, Ga., at 5.45 o'clock on the morning of the 23rd of May, 1898, the third section of the train, in command of Maj. Geo. E. Butler, collided with a freight train, and the result was one killed and seven injured. W. M. Barbee, of Company K, was crushed between the cars and instantly killed. Of the seven men, only one was seriously injured.

Arriving at Jacksonville, Fla., on May 23rd, tents were pitched about two miles from the city.

This was the second regiment to encamp at Jacksonville, Fla.; the Second Illinois Volunteer Infantry having arrived one day earlier.

All the members of the regiment, eager to prepare themselves for real service in the field against the enemy, devoted their whole time and attention to the daily drills and other instructions, and it is due the credit of Colonel Armfield and his staff of efficient officers that the regiment attained such a high standard of merit among the volunteer organizations of the United States.

In August, 1898, orders were received from the War Department for the regiment to hold itself in readiness to proceed to the Island of Porto Rico, under command of Major-General Wade, but the peace negotiations which were going on at Washington between M. Cambon, French Ambassador to the United States, on behalf of Spain, and the Secretary of State, which resulted in the signing of the peace protocol, and a cessation of hostilities of the Army and Navy, caused the regiment to remain with the Seventh Army Corps.

Nothing of special mention occurred to the regiment as an organization until orders were received for the mustering out of the service of the regiment, which was early in September, 1898.

Preparations were made for muster out, and when everything was ready for the mustering officer, another order was received from the War Department, retaining the regiment in the service.

On October 24, 1898, the regiment broke camp and left Jacksonville, Fla., for their new camp, near Savannah, Ga., where they were encamped with the other regiments of the Seventh Army Corps, on Thunderbolt road, about one and a half miles from the city.

On the morning of December 7th the regiment broke camp at Savannah and that morning boarded the transport Roumania and sailed next day for Havana, Cuba, arriving on evening of the 11th and went into Camp Columbia, at Bena Vista Station, on the Mariano Railroad, seven miles from Havana.

Being the first American soldiers to arrive at Havana, they received a welcome that will be ever remembered by those that witnessed it. Pen can not describe the intense gladness, almost bordering frenzy, displayed by the Cuban people at the sight of their liberators.

During the stay of the regiment on Cuban soil the usual drills were continued and the same rigid discipline was enforced. The conduct of the members was beyond reproach, and their gentlemanly deportment greatly impressed the natives, who had been so accustomed to cruelty and rowdyism.

Orders were given about the 18th of March to return to Savannah, Ga., where the regiment would be mustered out, and arrived there on the 28th of the same month, and were mustered out April 22, 1899.

SKETCH OF SECOND REGIMENT.

THOUGH most of the officers and men were young, there were quite a number who had been trained in war in that greatest school of modern times, the Army of Northern Virginia, and Colonel Burgwyn, Majors Dixon and Cotton, Chaplain Osborne and Captains Davis, Bell, Jones, Smith and Cobb had followed Lee and Jackson, Longstreet, Hoke and Ransom during the years 1861-1865.

Chaplain Osborne, as Colonel of the Fourth North Carolina Regiment, Anderson's Brigade, was one of the most gallant officers of the Lost Cause, bearing on his person the scars of many wounds; and Quartermaster Davis, as Captain of a battery of artillery in the Army of Northern Virginia, fired his guns from sunrise to sunset at the battle of Sailor's Creek, whose echoes were the last to be heard in the tragedy at Appomattox.

There were also several State Guard companies, and their commanders, Captains Huske, Gray, Smith, Cobb and MacRae were experienced in the modern drill regulations, and Colonel Burgwyn had commanded the Fifth Maryland Regiment, of Baltimore, during his residence in that city, since the war; Major Wilder was a graduate of West Point of fifteen years' service, and Major Cotten had seen twenty-three years' service in the State Guard, during seven of which he filled the highest position, that of Brigadier-General.

Seven companies were enlisted west of Charlotte, and the other 5 east of Raleigh. The men were of exceptionally good height and uniform size, and the officers were a fine, soldierly-looking body of men.

So soon as the regiment was mustered in, it entered upon a rigid system of drill and discipline, which rapidly brought it up to a high state of efficiency.

Setting-up exercises, squad, company and battalion drills were daily gone through with, and the dress parades, with the fine regimental band, were witnessed by crowds of visitors from Raleigh and other cities of the State.

SEPARATION OF THE REGIMENT.

After six weeks of camp instruction, six companies were detached for duty along the coast of South Carolina and Georgia. Two (Companies A and E) were sent to Tybee Island, Ga., under command of Major Wilder; two (Companies D and G) to Land's End, S. C., under command of Major Dixon; and two (Companies C and I) to St. Augustine, Fla., under command of Major Cotten. Two companies (F and M) were also temporarily sent to Fort McPherson, Atlanta, Ga., for garrison duty at that point. Headquarters and the four remaining companies were sent to St. Simon's Island, Ga., one of the best locations for a camp in the South. At all these stations the conduct of the men was such as to merit the approval of their officers and the commendation of the public, and when the several detachments were ordered back to Raleigh preparatory to muster out of the service, there was but one expression by those with whom they had been associated, and that was regret at their departure and encomiums on their good conduct.

The citizens of the neighboring city of Brunswick gave the camp at St. Simon's Island a grand barbecue in recognition of the good conduct of those stationed at that post; and the papers of St. Augustine were marked in their praise of the efficiency and good behavior of the two companies stationed in that ancient city.

The detachments at Tybee and Land's End were subjected to one of the severest storms known on the coast; and though their tents were blown away and much personal property lost and the camps submerged under water, there were no lives lost.

HEALTH OF THE MEN.

Soon after muster in, as a matter of precaution, the entire regiment was vaccinated. It was estimated that at one time over a thousand men were affected. So successful was the operation that not one case resulted fatally.

While in camp at Raleigh a mild type of measles broke out, and there were a number of typhoid and malarial fever cases, and more or less dysentery and diarrhoea, but the mortality was small, there being but four deaths from typhoid fever while at Raleigh, and only eight from the same disease in all.

SANITARY CONDITION OF THE CAMP.

On moving to Camp Dan Russell—at the Fair Grounds, Raleigh, N. C.—the wells were all cleaned out and deepened, and the water was regarded as exceptionally pure, but it was subsequently ascertained from an analysis that the water from some of the wells was not suitable for drinking, and these were disused. At St. Simon's Island the drinking water came from an artesian well. At this station the health of the men was excellent. Sea bathing, fishing and boating were the recreations when not on duty.

When the regiment was ordered to reassemble at Raleigh preparatory to muster out, the health of the men was exceptionally good, and the few who were too sick at the time to return with their companies soon followed.

THE MUSTER OUT.

Under the orders, as first issued, the men were given a thirty-days' furlough to return at its expiration to Raleigh, where the final proceedings of muster out were to take place. Had the orders not have been changed the regiment would have been in camp at Raleigh during the State Fair, and thus the men from the western part of the State would have been given the chance of visiting it, and the opportunity of seeing the people and products of other sections.

These original orders were subsequently revoked, and the companies were ordered to be mustered out at different points in the State most accessible to the places where the companies were organized.

Should there be occasion for further hostilities with Spain, it will be regretted that so fine a body of soldiers, remarkable for uniformity of size and regularity of height, well-drilled and disciplined, should have been disbanded. That they were not given the opportunity of fighting at Santiago or charging over the San Juan hill, was no fault of theirs—for no one who knows the personnel of the officers or men doubts in the least, that all that was wanting to make the record of the regiment a source of pride to the State, and an honor to the command, was the opportunity.

SKETCH OF THIRD REGIMENT.

WAR HAVING been declared against the Kingdom of Spain and a call for volunteers made by the President, the Negroes of North Carolina were among the first to respond and offer their services to their country.

James H. Young, of Raleigh, N. C., was commissioned Major of the Russell Black Battalion, composed of three companies, A, B, and C. The men were all new recruits with the exception of Company A, of Charlotte, N. C., who were members of the State Guard. Yet these men were determined to serve their country and to put forward every effort to become well drilled and disciplined.

The Battalion went in camp at Fort Macon, N. C., May 30, 1898, and was mustered into the service of the United States as of date May 12, 1898. The Battalion remained at Fort Macon drilling daily. All the while Major Young was untiring in his efforts to form a regiment. He succeeded through His Excellency, Governor Russell.

On the 19th day of July, 1898, the Russell Black Battalion and seven companies that came to Fort Macon from the first to the tenth of July were mustered into the service of the United States as the Third Regiment of North Carolina.

The regiment remained at Fort Macon from July 19 to September 14, where they were well drilled and disciplined. The sanitary condition of the camp was most excellent, there rarely being a case of sickness among the men. The bathing facilities could not be surpassed. The camp was within two hundred yards of the finest surf beach in the United States.

Squad, company and battalion drills were daily, and one through and dress parade every afternoon was one of the features that visitors from Beaufort, Morehead City and other parts of the State looked forward to with delight.

On September 14, 1898, the regiment was moved, by order of the War Department, in three sections to Knoxville, Tenn., this being the first time since the muster in of the regiment that its hopes were strengthened of being sent to Cuba.

En route to Knoxville, the first section was under command of Major Haywood, the second under Major Walker, and the third under Colonel Young. The first and third sections arrived at Knoxville on the afternoon of September 15, without any accident. The second section had the misfortune to have a coach leave the rail and turn over a few miles from Asheville, injuring two or three men seriously, but killing no one.

The regiment pitched camp at Knoxville on the afternoon of its arrival, and for the first time was thrown in contact and association with their fellow comrades of other regiments. The delight and joy of the men can not be described at being thus associated with their fellow countrymen for one grand and common cause.

By this time the regiment had attained such a degree of proficiency as to place it easily in the first rank of the volunteer regiments in the service as to drill and discipline.

The officers and men had worked hard to bring about this proficiency second to none in the volunteer service, and they had cause to be proud of their records.

On September 20, 1898, Secretary of War, Russell A. Alger, reviewed the troops stationed at Knoxville, and the Third North Carolina Regiment received special and marked recognition for their appearance and soldierly bearing from the Secretary, as also from the vast throng that witnessed the review.

While in Knoxville, Colonel Young was Brigade Commander from the 1st of October to the 20th, thus showing the confidence and esteem in which the Third North Carolina Regiment was held by the War Department.

The regiment remained at Knoxville until it became so cold that on November 21 it was ordered to Macon, Ga., a warmer climate and a more suitable camp for winter. Nothing of special interest happened while en route from Knoxville to Macon.

The regiment arrived at Macon on the 22nd of November and found the camp ground already laid off by a detachment that had been sent a few days prior. It was found to be a most desirable place for a winter camp, being of a light sandy loam and a little more elevated than the surrounding country, and about three miles from the city of Macon, and connected by electric car line. There, as other places, the regiment was in splendid condition as to health and practice in drill.

On December 21, the troops stationed at Macon passed in review before President William McKinley, and again, as before, the Third North Carolina Regiment received special attention for their general appearance and soldierly bearing.

While in Macon, the first Army Corps, of which the Third North Carolina was a part, was ordered to hold itself in readiness to proceed to Cuba, consequently the men were all vaccinated and their general health looked after. This original order, however, was subsequently revoked as to the Third North Carolina and several other regiments belonging to this corps. Orders then quickly followed for the muster out of almost the entire volunteer army doing service in the United States, and among that number was the Third North Carolina Regiment, and on the 1st of February, 1899, was begun the muster out, and by the 8th the entire regiment had been mustered out of the service. And the men who had once been the defenders and protectors of the old flag, laid down their arms once more to become quiet and peaceful citizens of the old Commonwealth.

It will thus be seen that the regiment did not have the opportunity of immortalizing itself in the battle of San Juan nor at Santiago, but it was no fault of theirs, for the officers and men were ever ready and longing for active service that they might write their names in the records of bravery and fortitude.
